

The Saskatchewan Special Support Program (SSP)

Did you know that you need to apply to the Saskatchewan Special Support Program (SSP) to remain eligible for your 3sHealth employer-sponsored drug plan?

What is the SSP?

The SSP is an income-tested program that helps Saskatchewan residents with high drug costs in relation to their income.

Eligible applicants will receive a letter each year that provides a deductible and co-payment for coverage under the provincial prescription drug plan. When your application is complete, your prescription drug costs will be split between the SSP, your employer drug plan, and you.

Once you apply:

- Saskatchewan's Ministry of Health determines a family's deductible and co-payment amounts for their prescription drugs based on the family's annual adjusted income.
 - This annual adjusted income is determined by deducting $3,500 per dependent under age 18 from the combined annual family income.
- The SSP co-payment amount is determined by how much the family's drug costs exceed 3.4 per cent of their adjusted combined income.
- When you reach your family deductible, the SSP will pay a portion before your employer drug plan pays the balance.
